

TRAINING ANNOUNCEMENT

Psychological profiles of lone actors

24–25 November 2026

On-site (in person)

Location: Frankfurt,
Germany

Languages: English

Understanding the psychological and behavioural factors associated with lone actors is essential for assessing potential risks, identifying individual needs and developing tailored and effective interventions. However, lone actors do not fit a single psychological profile and their pathways towards violent extremism are shaped by a complex combination of individual, social and situational factors.

This 1.5-day advanced training will equip experienced frontline professionals with specialised, research-informed knowledge and practical frameworks for multi-stakeholder assessment and the development of tailored intervention strategies to support the safe disengagement and reintegration of lone actors, with a particular focus on minors and women.

The programme will be highly interactive and practice-oriented, combining expert input, practical exercises, small-group simulations and peer exchange. Participants will have opportunities to apply the approaches introduced during the training to realistic scenarios.

WHO CAN PARTICIPATE?

This training is designed for experienced professionals working in multi-agency settings who are involved in managing cases and designing, authorising or implementing PCVE intervention plans.

Participants should have at least 3 years of relevant professional experience.

Relevant professional profile may include,

- Law enforcement officers and probation professionals.
- Juvenile justice and child protection professionals.
- Social workers and family support professionals.
- Psychologists, psychiatrists and mental health professionals.
- Professionals working in women's support and crisis services.

WHAT YOU WILL LEARN

By the end of this training, participants will be able to:

- Identify the most common psychological characteristics of lone actors, with the focus on minors.
- Describe specific challenges when assessing cases involving minors and women.
- Conduct multistakeholder assessment of lone actors, taking into account individual risks and protective factors.
- Adapt ways of responding to the specific needs of the disengagement and reintegration of lone actors while ensuring a secured oversight.
